Figuring out life one educated guess at a time

Say goodbye to necrotic skin! (SRS +47 days)

This past week has been stressful. The stuff from last weekend has kind of gotten resolved in a good way, but then some new things that bring their own stress came up. But, this week has been the best I've felt about relationships since I've been back. So yay! As for the SRS side of things, it's been a slightly annoying week for most of it. Work is less than enjoyable, I now have to stay until 5 which means I can't dilate until 6ish which means I am down to two dilations a day during the week. Thankfully this hasn't caused an issue as of yet, although the past two days things have been a bit tighter. I'm not sure how to get 3 dilations in a day unless I do the 2nd and 3rd only like 2 hours apart or wake up in the middle of the night to do it. Neither seem beneficial. And since I've been able to keep depth not a huge deal IMO.

I've also been in a lot of pain the last two days. So I've been taking Tramadol. I'm hoping my endo will prescribe me more. I have some, but I'll need more through this I'm guessing and if he won't prescribe more (or something like it) I'll need to find another doc. The upside is that the necrotic skin that was over my clit is gone!!!! I was going to the bathroom and look down in my pad to see this black and white thing... it was pretty gross looking. I removed the pad and looked, and guess what! It's just pink and no more hard black thing at the top of my pussy where my clit is! Score! Me being me though I got a Q-Tip and investigated it a bit. It was about the consistency of one of those semi-dried gross boogers when you're sick and blow your nose. There was a clear suture that I saw a day or two before that was in it as well.

Inside there was some remaining white stuff, but mostly pretty clear looking inside. It should be a lot better in the next few days to the point I might even be able to explore bits down there in month 3 and see if I can get off now (since I had a hard time the last few years before SRS I wasn't sure if that would change or not). I took a bath last night and played a little on the outside of the labia lips. That was pretty good feeling and pretty sensitive. But then I could feel getting turned on down there and stopped. Meh. That's so annoying. Especially since my sex drive has come back this week with a fucking vengeance. It wants to makeup for the past ~15 years of not having a pussy or something apparently.

I'm still bleeding when going #2 or dilating a little. It's not a ton just a little. But things are definitely tinted red. One day that'll not be the case and it'll be awesome. Until then, such is life as a post-op trans woman.
