Figuring out life one educated guess at a time

More blood, depression, and pain (SRS +39 days)

It's been almost a week since my last update... It's been a rough week. A really shitty week. I alluded to it in one of my recent posts that some issues were happening with one of my partners and I. Unfortunately that hasn't gotten better and gotten worse to be totally honest. I am so unhappy with where things are. Tramadol is about the only thing keeping me sane, which is really annoying because it's not even being used because of pain. Instead I'm using it because I'm ever so slightly happier when I have one or two in my system constantly...

As far as the SRS healing goes, well a few days ago I woke up to go to the bathroom. Ended up pushing for #2 but nothing was coming out. When I wiped I found so much blood. I dilated with the medium only and did more of a static dilation method. I swapped working from home last week from so I could stay home that day. Ended up sleeping another 3-4 hours. Didn't bleed much the rest of Tuesday outside of some spotting. But through this week off and on I've been bleeding in various places and to various extents.

Today I woke up to blood having come from between my majora and minora within that fold at the front. That stopped, but wasn't exactly thrilling to see. That said, it's not entirely surprising or "scary" as it's likely that those stitches are going to start falling out and stuff. I'm about 6 weeks, and it's okay to start cleaning within that fold after 2 months. Which means I'm only 2 weeks from that point. So we'll see. I also started taking some salt baths (just standard sea salt) as that is supposed to help with healing. Plus it kind of just feels good. I try to only do it once or twice a week though.

I also stopped using hibiscus soap entirely. I feel that was drying things out down there and was causing issues so I switched to just some standard Oil of Olay body wash to clean the outside. It seems to have helped make it feel less dry on the surface. Stitches have been falling out at a rate of 1-2/day. Oh and in really fun news the necrotic skin up by my clit is going away! It's still there, and not quite gone but it's clearly healing and might be gone by the 2 month mark at this rate. I hope so.

After I started this post I took a nap mid way through. During that nap I didn't really fall asleep but didn't quite stay awake. That haze before going to actual sleep is where I spent the hour or so laying down. Which gave me time to think. And first up was holy shit sex drive. I got so fucking horny and just wanted a hot dude (or chick) to lay on and "belong" to (not in a BDSM way, in a romantic 'I'm theirs' way). I haven't felt I've really had that since I've been back, and coupled with my sex drive I really wanted it. I thought about seeing if I could cuddle with the guy in our quad... but realized that would be bad because I'd likely attempt to start things... And also thought about a threesome with him and one of my partners lol. Yup... this sex drive thing is nice... just wish I could fucking do something to satiate it lol. The other thing I kind of thought through was regarding the first paragraph and the relationship that's been causing me issues. I think I've kind of came to a "oh, that's how to move forward without it ending" solution. It's not ideal, and not what I wanted at this point but it's better than any other option I've thought of or that's been put out there.

Sooooo fun week. Hopefully next week is better 😊
