Figuring out life one educated guess at a time

This is really hard (SRS +64 days)

The past week or two things got a lot harder. Dilation became harder, muscles were tighter, pain was more intense, scar tissue formed faster it seems, etc. I am now a week into month 3 and it's not all that surprising. But I really just want this over with. I still have yet to really play around with anything down there, but I can't discern if that is due to the pain/discomfort around my pussy or if it's because I'm depressed as one partner and I moved to a friends-only relationship and the other is not there in any capacity it feels. So I have no real reason to care about if I could explore things down there. Sure I want to. Sure my sex drive is back majorly. But I know any sex I had would need to pretty much tell any new partners I'm trans, and I don't see how it would be enjoyable at this point. So, combine depression around two (and in a way 3 since I was in a poly quad) relationships basically ending and that sex likely won't be enjoyable for me due to pain/tightness/etc for a wonderful place to be at.

On the upside, I have two trips planned for work. Those usually are awesome and I tend to be pretty happy doing those. So hopefully those will give me two weeks of enjoyment at least while I'm out of town. We'll have to see though. It'll be interesting packing my post-op care crap. I should make a list now so I don't forget shit. That would suck. Sooo:

- Dilators obviously
- Lube (enough for 6 full days even though I won't be at either place that long)
- Tarp
- Bed liner sheet things (to put on top of the tarp that I sit on) – 1 per day+2 extras
- Plenty of panty liners/pads
- HRT obvi

- Gloves (although not technically needed)
- Lube injector thingy
- Make sure to take a bath before travel as I don't know that either will have a tub
- Coconut oil (I need to buy this...)

Speaking of coconut oil... I need to figure out when I can start using that. I might just say screw it and start it this weekend as I'll be 9.5 weeks at that point and with any luck it'll help healing happen faster. But I suppose we'll see.

I'm trying to go back to 3x/day, although I'm struggling finding the motivation to do a 3rd. It doesn't seem to really help so I end up basically just having to do sheer force of will to do it. Speaking of... I should go do that now. I can't wait for these work trips... Hopefully that'll get my mind off of enough stuff I can enjoy life a bit, if just for a few days. I miss that. I should try to start running too. Hmmm. Back to the topic at hand though, I bleed most times when I empty out the back side as well as usually a bit during dilation. I believe the former is pretty standard and the latter isn't a big deal and likely from the urethra and stops pretty quick.
